by Barry Wenig
Sports Editor

The University of Maryland produced a 117-96 victory over GW's Colonials at Ft. Myer Saturday night, despite a raucous and partisan crowd who attempted to rattle the sophomore-laden Terp squad. The game had its moments of good play by both sides, but the outcome was rarely in doubt as Maryland outplayed and outclassed the Colonials.

The early play instilled the seeds of upset in the minds of the Buff rooters as Lenny Baltimore, Mike Battle and Ronnie Nunn touched off the initial fireworks. The well balanced combination of outside shooting and tough inside work, stunned the Terps and allowed GW the momentary pleasure of a short lived lead.

Then, however, the 3000 fans were treated to a superlative show, put on by Maryland's All-America candidate, Tom

'What these landlords do'

O St. Tenants Cheated, Angered

by Brad Manson
Asst News Editor

Complaints ranging from exorbitant rents to inadequate maintenance and poor security precautions have prompted 20 people to leave their off-campus townhouse dwellings, while causing others to contemplate legal action.

The students, all residents of several house-apartments on 21st St. west of O St. owned by Frank Calcara and managed by Mike Belli, are being encouraged by Paul Cohen, one of the dissatisfied tenants, to band together and do something about the off-campus housing situation for those students contemplating a move from university dorms.

In a proposal for the establishment of an Off-Campus Housing Board, Cohen said "The student who wishes to live outside of university housing is basically on his own to find housing and to deal with landlords and realtors."

He added that one of the goals and purposes of the board is "To provide a service where students can obtain information on housing problems in general, in specific areas, and with specific landlords."

"It is just amazing what these landlords do to you once they get you to sign a lease," Cohen said in a meeting Friday night to discuss the housing problems on 21st St. "When I got my lease from Belli and Calcara I took it home and had my dad look at it. He crossed off a couple of things and added a couple, like Belli had to paint the place and provide more security."

"When I took the lease back to Belli he tore it up and said that I had nothing to worry about that he would take care of everything. Well he didn't," Cohen charged.

Cohen said that he finally "got fed up with the whole thing" and decided to move out. He added that many of the students around him shared his sentiments about Belli and the living conditions and also decided to move.

"When we moved into the house we had to put down a $450 security deposit that we are supposed to get back when we move out, provided the house is in good condition," Cohen said. "When we told Belli we were moving we asked him to come down and look at the place so we could get the money back. He said he couldn't come down because he was 'a very busy man' and that he would come down next week," he added.

The day after Cohen moved he went back to his house only to find that the lock had been

SPIA Opens to Press, Returns to Letter Grades

The School of Public and International Affairs faculty voted last Friday to open their meetings to the press and approved returning to the five letter grading system without QPI.

In voting to admit the press, SPIA becomes the first individual college faculty within the University to open its meetings. The only other faculty body holding open meetings currently is the University-wide Faculty Senate.

Admission of the press was approved with only one dissenting vote, cast by Slavic Languages Prof. Charles Moser. Before giving their unanimous approval to the letter grade system, the faculty heard a report from the SPIA Student-Faculty-Alumni Advisory Committee which said it "acquiesces as a practical matter" to the letter grade system following its approval by the Columbian College faculty last October.

The report, read by History Prof. Peter Hill, however, blasted the Columbian College for "the arbitrary and precipitous manner" in which they switched to the letter grade system.

Political Science Prof. John Brewer objected to that part of the report, stating that it was "discourteous to criticize the actions of a sister body in the University."

Hugh LeBlanc, also from the Political Science department, said more was involved in the grades question than the "practical" matter of making SPIA's grading system conform with the Columbian College system, citing problems which students have encountered in transferring credit and applying to graduate schools under the old four level Honors, High Pass, Pass, Fail system.

"I don't feel boxed in by Columbian College," LeBlanc said, "I feel I can vote on the merits of the issue and still vote to go back" to the letter grading system.

In other business, the faculty voted to establish a BA program in Chinese Language and Literature and accepted a Curriculum Committee recommendation that the pre-Public and International Affairs Humanities requirement be reduced from 12 to 6 semester hours.

Exam Schedule Inside

The complete undergraduate final exam schedule appears on the middle two pages of today's Hatchet. It includes the day, time and room assignment for all exams.

This Thursday's Hatchet will be our last issue for the semester. The final deadline for Bulletin Board and Unclassified ads is noon tomorrow. We will resume publication for the spring semester on Thursday January 20, which will be the first day of registration.

Gallup Expresses Faith In Efficiency Of Polls

by Jerry Dworkin
Hatchet Staff Writer

Pollster George Gallup, speaking to 150 students in the Ballroom Thursday night, contended that the polling process has improved without affecting the actual outcome of an election.

According to Gallup, "understanding and acceptance of polls has grown. Today the modern poll can and does function as a creative arm of government. In the past, leaders of government didn't pay attention to the results of polls. I believe that things have greatly changed."

Gallup spent much time refuting the "bandwagon theory" which asserts that voters like a winner and would, upon seeing poll results, switch their votes to the candidate in the lead.

But Gallup stated "there exists strong evidence proving that the 'bandwagon theory' is just a myth". He pointed towards the 1948 Dewey-Truman election, where Truman's upset victory shocked pollsters who had ceased surveying in September, due to Dewey's apparently wide victory margin.

"Regardless of what we poll on, we invariably stir the emotions of many with our findings," said Gallup, adding that annual criticism is directed at what many consider misallocated polling samples and inadequate procedures.

But Gallup contended "standards of the interviewers are kept high," with women constituting the majority of pollsters, and "cheating is not a problem" due to the constant checks being conducted by office personnel.

"Success of any interview is in the questionnaire," stated Gallup, adding that a "multiple dimension approach" has been developed for the forming of a survey.

According to Gallup, the survey asks the individual: "have you heard or read" about the topic under consideration, then proceeds to measure the awareness, and strength of the individual's convictions on the subject.

Concerning controls over the Gallup polling organization, he explained that "full details are given in our releases concerning time and methods. We cannot possibly swing opinion." The National Council on Ethics has jurisdiction over polling organizations.

While much of the evening's discussion dealt with the upcoming presidential election, Gallup refrained from expressing his own preferences for fear that they would be construed as predictions.

Gallup displayed great faith in the accuracy of his polls. "We could not be more accurate than we have been," he said.

GW-Wide Lottery Provision

Co-ed Dorm Group Submits Plan

by Ken Sommer
Hatchet Staff Writer

At the request of a Rice Hall-student co-ed dorm committee, Dean of Students Marianne Phelps has accepted a proposal for a University-wide lottery to designate dorm room assignments for next year.

The proposal was adopted by the Priority Committee despite outside student support for allowing residents top priority in returning to their present dorms.

The proposal sent to Phelps calls for a February lottery to return men and women to dorms "based on the student's number of semesters in the GW residence hall system."

When interviewed Friday, Housing Director Ann Webster stressed that she would abide by whatever proposals the students formulated.

Commenting on the Priority Committee's proposal, Webster stated, "It is not necessarily the most fair proposal for all residents. It is, however, the least unfair to all."

But controversy arose because half of the rooms in Crawford and Mitchell Halls will be reserved for women next year and Madison Hall will be reserved for graduate students only, resulting in the displacement of many residents, mostly freshmen, who would be low in priority in an all-University lottery.

An ad hoc committee, Students for Fair Housing, co-chaired by Crawford residents Pete Hollinshead and Rich Pober, urged the Priority Committee to hold a referendum to choose between the Committee's own proposal and one formulated by the ad hoc committee.

The alternative proposal would institute separate lotteries for each dorm, allowing residents top priority in returning to their present dorms and also allowing displaced Crawford, Madison and Mitchell residents priority in lotteries of other dorms.

According to Priority Committee member Steve Stein, the committee did not accept the alternative proposal nor would it call for a referendum because "it [the ad hoc plan] was devoted entirely to men, ignoring half of the people living in dorms."

Stein further stressed, "Since the number of returning juniors will be so small, returning freshmen and sophomores have little to worry about in obtaining their desired rooms."

Hollinshead, however, claims the "Priority Committee's refusal to hold a referendum shows their fear that their own proposal would have been defeated."

"The residents," Hollinshead continued, "should have a voice in determining the room choice policy."

Pober emphasized, "The Priority Committee is the biggest joke in the University. It just didn't give our proposal a fair chance."

Shortly after Housing Director Ann Webster's September 30 announcement that Thurston, Mitchell, Madison and Crawford Halls will be co-ed next year, several committees of administrators and students were formed to work out fair and adequate systems for instituting the new policy.

City Officials In Discord Over Viability Of District Home Rule

by Dick Polman
News Editor

In a Center discussion on the future viability of D.C. government, city officials and politicians tangled Thursday night over the positive and negative aspects of seeking home rule, or statehood.

Political consultant Doug Patton spoke for all participants at the Experimental Humanities symposium when he said "home rule is definitely coming," but an aide to D.C. Delegate Walter Fauntroy and representatives of the D.C. Statehood Party disagreed over the virtues of home rule.

Fauntroy lieutenant Del Lewis, stressing the need for building power within the system, told the 50 students that Fauntroy's presence in the House is a great asset. He's gained credibility. He's taken half a loaf as a non-voting delegate, but he votes in committee, and this is very important.

But D.C. Statehood Party Chairman Louis Aronica scorned this approach to strengthening D.C. government. "By this method," he charged, "Congress can intimidate us. On a bill, Congress can chew this part, chew that part, they'll change it, they'll give us another half loaf." Assistant Chairman Van Richardson added, "We want to run this city, not (John) McMillan (C.D.-S.C.), (Joel) Broyhill (R-Va.), or that crook John Dowdy (D-Tex.). We're sick and tired of house niggers making decisions for the District field niggers, if you know what I'm talking about."

An aroused Lewis sternly responded "I'm sophisticated enough to know how it is to operate within the system. You gotta know who casts the vote, who has the power."

Moreover, he added, "Congressmen with this power have no idea what goes on here, and could care less. Taking a statehood bill to the Congress right now is an exercise in futility."

Aronica, sneering at what he termed the Fauntroy "hat in hand" method, contended that statehood "is a clean issue." He said the Constitution designated the Federal District "to be only 10 miles square." Accordingly, he asked "why can't Congress designate a Federal area in a District section where people do not live?"

Carl Bergman, a legislative aide to the D.C. City Council, offered the opinion that, regardless of whether the District received home rule, or statehood, "we're seeing the developing of leadership talents" in the D.C. Delegate and School Board elections. "If we got home rule or if we got statehood," he contended, "we could run the city well."

But a student asked Lewis how the "hat in hand" method would actually work to gain the District further representation. Lewis patiently explained "each step will get use closer there. If it's hat in hand, it's hat in hand, but we are getting bills through. A deal is where you make your mark. And you can't make a deal if you don't know who has the power."

Lewis also defended the performance of Fauntroy by reminding the (gathering) that the delegate "represents 800,000 people, with the same staff allowances, the same office space," as congressmen who represent considerably fewer constituents.

These youngsters, students at the Seaton Elementary School, 10th & Rhode Island Ave., were treated to a Thanksgiving lunch last Wednesday. Their hosts were junior coeds who are enrolled in a special education program here. In addition to lunch, they were given a tour of the Center and had the chance to bowl and shoot pool.

Tax Conference Displaces Drama

by Robin Gerber
Hatchet Staff Writer

The Center administration circumvented its own building use policy Thursday by scheduling a two day conference in the Center theater which interrupted Drama Dept. preparations for this week's play opening.

Set designer Dean Munroe, after having worked on the sets for "The Killing of Sister George" all of Wednesday night found the Washington Tax Conference moving into the theater at 8 a.m. Thursday morning. The conference, which was unconnected with GW, had rented the theater for both Thursday and Friday morning. No one in the drama department had been notified of the conference's existence.

The play's director, Nate Garner, pointed out that Article IV, section F of the Center Building Use Policy states: "In the event that a performing group schedules a production which requires the construction of sets or properties, that group may have exclusive use of the theater for a period up to one week before the actual performance."

"During this time, other events may be scheduled in the theater by the Director of Student Activities but only with the approval of the group which has been granted the exclusive rights to the facility." Although the Tax Conference took place in the theater Thursday, Drama

Director Sidney James managed to convince Assistant Center Director Donald Cotter to move the conference to the ballroom for Friday after two terse phone calls. James' production dates and theater time were on record a year in advance.

When Cotter was asked Thursday about the conflict, his response was "No comment on that." When asked specifically when the Tax Conference was approved, he said he would not want to comment on that either until he had checked into the circumstances of the matter. All scheduling of the theater is approved by Cotter's office. Cotter maintained that he had "talked with Dr. James about that yesterday."

Play director Nate Garner verified that no one from the production had been consulted or notified. James phoned Cotter protesting, "We didn't know anything about this group coming in here at all this morning. Obviously that's just a blatant violation of the rules." James explained that Cotter had talked to him about a conflict with the music department which James had accommodated; and a conflict with the Program Board. But "he never said a word to me about (the Tax Conference)."

Student Activities Program Coordinator Janet Hardy reported that James personally arranged for the Program Board's Friday movie to be provided space in Building C.

The Tax Conference, said Garner with resentment, "is an outside group, solely in the theater for money. I respect the Center's need for money, but they have ignored our scheduled right to be there."

Garner commented that he did not know if the conference's placement was a deliberate action or a "bumbling oversight."

He was very concerned, however, that the Center administration did not take into consideration the many GW students who work on or attend the play. When the Center was planned, Garner recalled, much care was taken so that the performing arts would not have the scheduling problems they had suffered under in Lisner Auditorium.

Clothing, Medical Supplies Needed In East Bengal

The GW Board of Chaplains is sponsoring a clothing drive for the Bengla Desh refugees, to be conducted through Friday, December 10.

United Methodist Chaplain Ray Clements, one of the coordinators of the drive said "adequate clothing helps men, women and children maintain their dignity," adding that students, faculty, and administrators can donate clothing in boxes placed in campus dorms, or at the Board of Chaplains Office, 2106 G Street.

Clements disclosed that "without general knowledge, the Government of India and AIR INDIA have been providing several air cargo flights each month for direct refugee relief assistance."

In addition to the clothing, the BOC is asking for donations of medical supplies. Mack Kauffman, Director of the Brethren Service Center, points out "vitamins and antibiotics with a two year validation date are particularly in demand."

Housing Rip-offs

It won't be long until students here start their annual search for off-campus housing for next year. The experiences of a group of students on O St. should serve as a sharp warning.

With the demand for relatively cheap off-campus housing consistently running ahead of the supply in this part of Washington, it is just common sense that students will be prime targets for all sorts of rip-offs and shady deals. There is no reason to expect this situation to change dramatically within the near future, but we do strongly support the idea of an Off-Campus Housing Board as a constructive remedial step.

The idea, proposed by the students involved in the O St. situation, makes sense in that, as they point out students are really on their own when they search for an apartment or house around here. We feel that the GW Housing Office, now primarily concerned with dormitories, should get involved in the off-campus housing situation. What we envision here is not any sort of return to in loco parentis, but just a basic informational function performed by the Housing Office.

Should an Off-Campus Housing Board be set up, we hope that our Housing Office will work with it in disseminating useful information and warnings to students on specific houses, apartment buildings and landlords.

In the meantime, there are groups operating now in Washington which should be able to help out student tenants who find themselves embroiled in one sort of hassle or another with a landlord. Neighborhood Legal Services, with a main office at 666 11th St., N.W., and other offices scattered throughout the District is one organization which can advise you of possible legal recourse to resolve your particular problem. The main office phone number is 628-9161.

Here on campus, aid and advice are readily available from the GW Legal Aid Bureau at 676-7163 and GW Help!, 244-2200, which specializes in consumer problems but can also be of assistance in landlord-tenant problems.

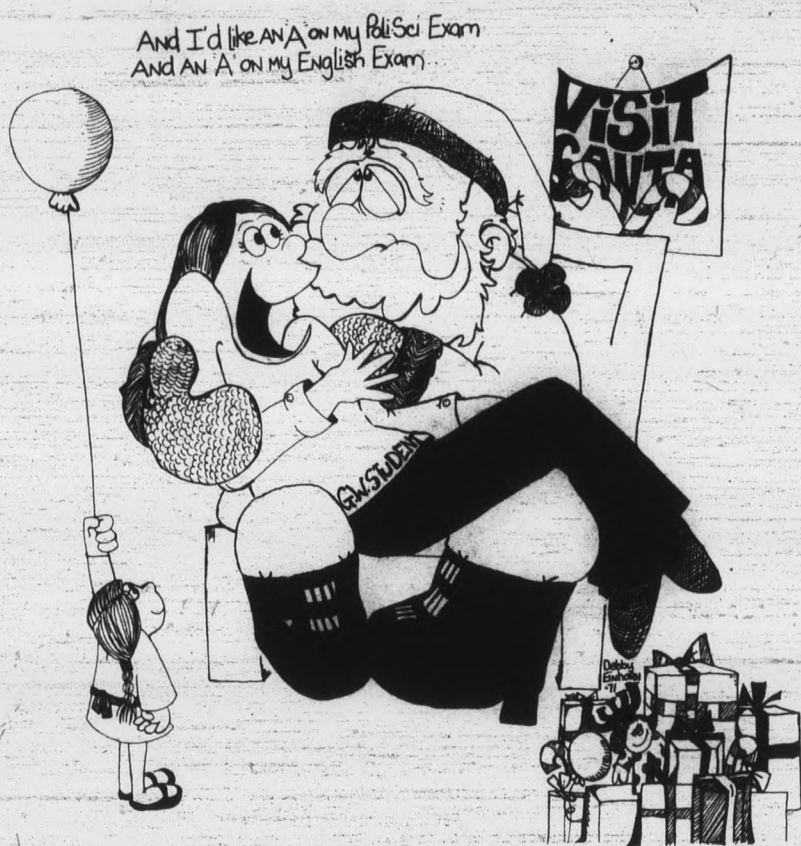

Another Step

Congratulations are certainly in order to the School of Public and International Affairs faculty for voting to open their meetings to the press. They are the first college faculty in the University to do this.

The fact remains, however, that the faculty is still primarily a closed group. We hope that the SPIA action will help other faculties to realize that they have nothing to lose, they have nothing to fear, should they let their meetings be public. As for this newspaper, we are glad to have the opportunity to report directly on one more event here. Accordingly, this decision to open one faculty's meetings will be a step towards better communication within the campus community.

Such communication will be further enhanced if the faculty of the rest of the schools in the University follow SPIA's example. We are convinced that the spectacle of the Columbian College meeting in October where that faculty voted to return to letter grades after consulting virtually nobody would have been avoided if the meeting was open and reported on directly.

Faculty meetings do not deal with state secrets. The lack of problems and misunderstandings on the part of the Faculty Senate since they opened their meetings several years ago, along with this recent, most enlightened move by SPIA, should convince the faculty of this University that time has come to open up.

YAF, Abortion, M. Wolf

Grapes & Wrath - Abortion Piece

I am extremely disappointed, disgusted, revolted, dismayed, and generally, to revert to the vernacular, pissed off, about the Hatchet's few notes on the disrupted grape festival.

It is the most flagrantly ridiculous piece of so-called journalism I have yet seen in that periodical. It does not attempt to present the facts of the actual disruption, only to report the sound and fury of the charges floating about in the aftermath. Then, to top it off, they quote me completely out of context to make me sound rather inarticulate.

I declared the meeting over at about 9, one hour after the disruption began. To say that we left before alternate courses of action could be suggested is, well, choose your own adjective. The Center staff present had already shown themselves totally unable to deal with the situation, and it was far too late to save anything more than our skins.

Already all the literature had been thrown around the room, two books had been stolen, the grapes had vanished, the paper cups had been tossed about, and the contents of several ashtrays had been decanted into the punch. Even then, the decision to close the meeting did not come immediately, until it was clear that the "discussion" which the visitors requested proved to be little more than an exchange of unpleasanties.

If the Hatchet insists on printing only the quote they have, removing it completely from all surrounding explanation, the least they could do is put quotation marks around "discussion" as was implied by the deliberate pause and change of tone in my dictation when I reached that final word.

Charles McClenon

Coming across the Hatchet today, I noticed your headline entitled: "2000 March for Abortion." I was rather disturbed to see that you failed to report that there was a counter-march held at approximately the same time, sponsored by the Woman's and Youth Coalition for Life. I find this type of reporting to be rather one-sided, and I am bewildered that a university newspaper run by students can be so biased. Furthermore, I cannot comprehend how a newspaper like yours which encourages abortions by numerous flashy advertisements, fails to see the pressing moral and social problems concerning this issue.

Christopher Basden

Sports Stars

Martin Wolf's basketball preview in the November 22 Hatchet Basketball Supplement is a fine example of the infantile type of gee-whiz sports reporting which unfortunately dominates sports pages across the country. According to a writer from this school of journalism every ballplayer is a "superstar," "great," or at the very worst, in Wolf's own words, "potentially super." I'm not going to condemn Marty for overdoing the praise bit, but it would be wise to keep in mind that for the most part his information comes from press releases and brochures from different college athletic departments which are invariably trying to outfight each other for newspaper space and push their All-America candidates.

For instance, it would behoove Marty to be a little more discerning than to bestow the "superstar" label to a good but rather ordinary ballplayer like Ernie DeGregorio of Providence. In Wolf's preview there were over a dozen athletes so described in a year when there are maybe two or three college players worth going across the street to see.

Certainly there are no Robertsons, Maraviches, or Alcindors in this year's crowd. In fact, due in large part to the professional raids on college teams, collegiate basketball is probably in its weakest state in some time. Shame on Martin Wolf for telling us that this will be "college basketball's greatest season ever." Is he on the NCAA payroll? By the way, Harvard will never earn a rating as high as twelfth until they spend some time at the barber shop.

Jack Barry

DeRiggi OK

We would like to respond to William Schaefer's charge that Joe DeRiggi is unconcerned with the welfare of the D.C. community. Joe was an active member of the newly formed service organization, Circle K, last year and is a valuable member once again this year. If Mr. Schaefer needs any proof, Joe was at the bowling alley Friday afternoon along with other people from Circle K, Project Share, and the GW community, supervising handicapped students from the Grant school in bowling.

We do not wish to involve our organization in any political conflicts, but cannot stand by and see such a genuinely concerned student's character maliciously slandered. We are not speaking in our official capacities as members of Circle K, but rather, as interested members of the University community who do not wish to see Joe unjustifiably slandered. To conclude, we are not at all impressed by such an immature emotional outburst, and we suggest that Mr. Schaefer's criticism be more constructive in the future.

Scoop Jackson: Common Sense

The first thing to say about Henry M. Jackson is that whatever Scoop does, he does effectively. The best indication of Jackson's effectiveness lies in his electoral performance back home. Washington state has a long tradition of individualism in electing officials. For example, while voting Republican in 1960, it elected a Democratic governor. And while it went Democratic in the 1964 and 1968 presidential elections, it named a Republican governor. In 33 years of running for office, Jackson has never lost an election. In 1970 Scoop beat his eight primary opponents (including the one for whom McCarthy campaigned) with 87% of the votes and won the election by a margin of 709,000 votes. Jackson, with 83.9%, led the nation in all two party races for Senate or Governor.

In the Senate Jackson is one of the leading and most effective civil libertarians. He has a consistently liberal civil rights voting record, and it is supported by Roy Wilkins of the NAACP, who describes it as "very good". Jackson has put his integrationist beliefs to work; his daughter attends a D.C. public school that has a sizable black enrollment. Scoop's commitment to the principle of civil liberty is as firm today as it was twenty years ago when he spoke out against Sen. Joseph McCarthy. Jackson has voted against both the House Un-American Activities Committee and the Subversive Activities Control Act.

Last year he voted against the Nixon administration's D.C. crime bill, because he felt that the "no-knock" and preventive detention provisions symbolized "the illusion that we can buy social order at the expense of civil liberties."

On domestic issues, Jackson's liberalism is also apparent; he is not an echo of Nixon. Scoop supports measures that would greatly expand education aid, and he endorses a federal takeover of welfare. Jackson is also one of the first to support home rule for the district. On law and order, Scoop stands firm in his belief that it is not a code word for repression. After all, who are the victims? Not the people who live in the exclusive high rises or suburbs. The elderly, the poor, the black people are the victims; they are the ones who suffer because they cannot walk out in the streets by day or by night—that is repression.

The economy is another source of concern for Jackson. He called for wage-price controls two years before the White House took action. Scoop thinks that Nixon's program is too timid, that it will not deliver jobs fast enough and will not put enough money in the hands of consumers. In general, he does not believe it will get the economy off its back and moving. Walter Heller, President Kennedy's economic adviser, has said that of all the candidates, Jackson is the best economist.

Scoop is also one of the most effective environmentalists in the Senate. As Chairman of the Interior Committee he has authored such recent measures as the National Environmental Policy Act, the Land and Water Conservation Fund, the Federal Lands and Parks Recreation Act, and the Youth Conservation Corp. Jackson is the only elected official to have received the conservation award from the Sierra Club.

On foreign policy, Jackson stands firmly in the tradition of John F. Kennedy's Inaugural Address ("We shall pay any price, bear any burden..."). Scoop profoundly believes that the United States has a responsibility to the people of Vietnam, and that the issues of peace and democracy are at stake in Southeast Asia. Those who call Jackson a hawk forget that he is against a war of attrition, that he introduced a bill to provide funds for land reforms in Vietnam, that he supported the Cooper-Church amendment and similar measures to keep U.S. ground troops out of Laos and Thailand, and finally that he delivered a major speech opposing Thieu's one-man election.

Another aspect of Jackson's work on foreign affairs is his role in the Senate Armed Services Committee and in the Defense Appropriation Subcommittee. In 1970 Scoop sponsored an amendment to the Defense Procurement Act which, for the first time, put Congress on record as "gravely concerned" about Soviet penetration of the Middle East. It also called upon the President to "restore and maintain the military balance in the Middle East by furnishing to Israel the means of providing for its won security." In response to this speech, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff (D. Conn.) noted that "Israel does not have a better friend than the Senator from Washington." Jackson has also authored a resolution on the issue of Soviet Jewry. But Scoop's record on Israel does not start with his presidential ambition. Back in 1944 he promised that "if I can forward the work of making the dream of a Jewish homeland come true, you can count on my earnest efforts in this great humanitarian cause."

Jackson's candidacy is controversial since some people think that he is too liberal, others, that he is too conservative. In reality he represents the common people who are for civil rights, economic justice, and democracy. Jackson is the only Democrat now in contention for the nomination who can put together the strongest coalition to defeat Nixon. When Jackson announced his candidacy he said: "Whenever there is a crisis or a problem in this country, there is a tendency for both the right and left to go off the deep end. What is usually in short supply is common sense. The common sense of good solid people in America is what has moved us ahead, and I would hope to be able to provide some of that with a steady hand in an unsteady world."

Home of The Brave

LSATs: Here We Go Again

Richard Brave

This is a little experience, dear reader, which I must share with you, whether you are a freshman or a senior. It is called the Law School Admissions Test—LSAT. SAT—sound familiar? Ah yes, you'll all remember the SAT's those funky three hour tests with, if you were really fortunate, achievement tests—weren't they a groove, boys and girls? Well, SAT's were marshmallows compared to these law exams. With visions of F. Lee Bailey and Clarence Darrow in my head and with my sharpened number two pencil in hand (1 of 6—not in my hand, idiot), I broke the electro-magnetic tape with my eraser—I beg you to share this journey with me.

"Ah, section I—Reading Comprehension. Great! Endless type, thick paragraphs of really juicy stuff. Like the one about the measurement of halitosis in bats. Or Aristotle's definition of "Ciarchos," the Greek word for squat, which is similar in origin to the Yiddish tsatskileh. How 'bout the didactic tale of Chinese folk songs with enough names in it that I actually learned Chinese and can now, after one exam, speak it fluently? So long for this part.

Great—fifteen minutes up, three hours, fifteen minutes to go. (The summer tests were eight hours, dig that). Eyes swollen, mouth dry, hands sweaty, pits already gone in malodorous channels, that morning blast of Right Guard already dissolved to wet dew.

"Graphs. 45 minutes. That's decent—hmm, great, only 25 questions. First graph: 'The estimated time that Jupiter will collide with Earth, based on the recorded number of squirrel farts there were in Yellowstone National Park between March and September.' Pretty simple—only took fifteen minutes for the first answer. Next graph—only about twenty minutes left: let's get going, Brave. Hmmm: 'The number of pickles picked by Peter Piper measured in drams compared to number of seashells picked by Sally of the seashore during the time between 1911 and 1971, including the top 13 cities which both Sally and Peter visited during a Teen Tour drive in a Greyhound bus, with the average age of each child on the bus compared with Soviet children and each immersed in 100 milligrams of soluble liquid.' Great, great, just great. Question 59: 'What was the period during the GNP decreased most and Sally and Peter best got it on during the tour: A) Only I B) Only I and III C) Only I and II D) Only II E) I, II, and III.'

Bumming out very badly. Ahhh! Cases and principles—my stuff. All right, Rich, let's get cracking. Let's see: It seems that John Smith is actually the half-brother, Jose Martinez, to William Jones. Jones, a mulatto, was the blood cousin of William Henry. Henry, who found Pearce's note threatening to kill Jones if Smith and Henry were found ever doing the tango while working at TastiPie Company, where every year the employees of TastiPie got into a fistfight with Mexican laborers who threatened Martinez if he ever revealed his true identity. What principle of law, without violating the preceding principle and without passing GO or buying Boardwalk, renders this case most satisfactorily:

A) Held, for Jones and Martinez because Smith was Jewish B) Held, for Jones and Smith because the tango is a form of contract C) Held, for Smith and Martinez, because they are the same person D) Held, for TastiPie, because Henry actually knew that Martinez was both Jewish and a Mexican laborer.

Anyway, that was about it—or all I care to remember of it. Except I left my bowels in the test room and Educational Testing Service and the boys from Princeton have not yet returned them. I'm sure they won't keep them, though I can't put up with their crap, and they sure can't put up with mine.

That's why this column should be called BRAVE NEW WORLD. Because BRAVE NEW WORLD is a piece of what I thought was science fiction. And fiction is a distortion of the truth. And much truth is said in jest. And this is just a column, folks. Life boards, anyone?

'A New Atmosphere....' Student Involvement Key to New Courses

by Kent Ashworth
Asst. News Editor

Three GW departments, Biological Sciences, Geography, and Experimental Humanities have joined forces to offer a new spring semester course entitled "Environmental Issues: An Interdisciplinary Analysis." The three credit course, according to Humanities Development Program Coordinator Rod French, is part of an effort toward "a new atmosphere at GW."

"One of our objectives," French elaborated, is to get a better integration of classroom instruction and concern for public policy, so that what we're really doing is counteracting the idea that you get an education and then become a citizen."

"We've realized that that's a lousy way to teach anything, to sit and read books and then try to use it all in some remote future," French added.

Emphasizing student involvement in courses, French explained that students in Humanities have spent up to twenty hours per week at six hours credit for organizations like the Washington Ecological Center and the Metropolitan Coalition for Clean Air.

The course is listed under Biological Sciences 26, Geography 26, and Humanities 26, which students may take for credit in any of the three fields.

French said the focus of the course will be on discussion of the population question, pollution and human health, alternatives and controls such as recycling, issues of environmental health, problems of the urban environment, and economic, environmental, and technological effects on growth and development of society.

French feels a major advantage of the study of ecology is "the fact that it's still open. It makes a big difference in student morale when their research and input are really meaningful."

"The ecology question hasn't been closed and put in departmental boxes—there is a lot of room for student initiative," he added.

French stressed the involvement of both "university faculty and outside experts" in the program, and felt "by doing this sort of topical course, picking faculty who are worked up about the issue, it makes for a more dynamic classroom."

Supplementing the lectures of Biology, Geography, and Humanities professors will be talks by Philip Kreitner, Demographer of the World Bank, Professor Cecil Jacobson of the GW Medical School, and numerous other speakers from the Med School, Zero Population Growth, Central Atlantic Environmental Services, DC Department of Highways, and the Food and Drug Administration.

In addition, GW professors from the Philosophy, Political Science, Economics, Public Administration, and Business Administration departments will relate their fields to the ecology issue.

French outlined courses in computer technology and social issues," and a new freshman course on Washington, D.C. as an urban settlement such courses, he said, like the ecology program, which will have no pre-requisite.

"I can't really tell what the response to the new courses will be," French mused. "The way the course is designed it could appeal to the student who wants a better base for thinking about urgent environmental questions, or it could have the most appeal for the student who is to major in some scientific aspect."

changed on the front door, a task that Belli does after the tenants change. Cohen said he is afraid Belli is "going to give us the run-around" on the security deposit money because "he has had time to get into the house and mess it up a little."

Many of the students who gathered Friday night are still residents of the Calcare houses and were afraid to be identified because of the possible repercussions of their participation in the session. Cohen said that two female tenants wouldn't even come to the meeting. "They're afraid to come over, they said they agreed with our sentiments entirely, but they're just afraid."

One of the residents said, "Belli took a two bedroom apartment for $225 and raised it to $275 by putting up a cardboard divider and calling it a three bedroom apartment." Cohen said that one house front porch had completely rotted away and he told Belli that it needed to be fixed. "I fell through it one day and only then did he start to fix it," he added.

Many of the townhouse dwellers have taken legal action against Belli concerning their complaints. The Wage-Price Control Board found Belli in violation of the Phase I wage-price freeze last week, causing other tenants to consider the same course of action. A few students called the D.C. Board of Health and complained about their lack of heat, water, exposed pipes, living conditions and the Board of Health required Belli to make some minor changes.

Cohen said his basic purpose of bringing the people together and trying to formulate some opinions about the bad living conditions was for the establishment of the Off-Campus Housing Board. He said "This service would include meeting landlords to speak at the university, and to be able to provide a forum for communication between landlords and students."

GW Student 'Ripe For Rip-off'

The following is a personal account by Hatchet Sports Editor Craig Zuckerman of the housing hassles endured by him and 19 other tenants in the 2100 block of O Street.

Last spring, my roommate and I engaged in an annual event for many GW students, looking for off-campus housing. Little did we realize some of the problems we would be facing.

The situation becomes bad, due to a shortage of good housing in Washington giving landlords the upper hand. GW offers little aid to its students seeking off campus housing. Because of the students' poor bargaining position, it's difficult to find a landlord who doesn't either reject students or take advantage of them.

My roommate and I finally found a townhouse on the 2100 block of O St. Because of our rather desperate situation, we ended up paying $425 per month rent, plus a $50 security deposit for a place which was nowhere near worth that much. We later learned that the tenants before us paid $300 for the same place.

We were a couple more students ripe for a rip-off. Our house was a filthy mess when we took over. The kitchen was caked with grease, the walls needed a paint job, and there were inadequate locks on the doors, and no bars on the windows. We signed a month-to-month lease with the agreement that all these problems would be taken care of. None of them really ever were. Those who lived in our house over the summer cleaned and painted the entire place. It took the landlord three months of harassment to change the lock on the front door. Big deal, the house may as well not have had a lock. A big window next to the door could be opened from the outside with ease. That's how one of the guys living there got in at night, until he finally had a key made.

None of the dwellings our landlord managed had any type of security. As a matter of fact we were the most fortunate. In other apartments, the doors could be knocked in, rooms were made with cardboard walls, and exposed pipes everywhere.

I could go on and on about how bad things are down at that block of O Street. On top of all the physical detriments, all of the rents are outrageous. As a consequence, twenty of us are becoming former tenants. But now, those of us leaving face the problem of getting our security deposit back. The landlord has managed to stall for a week now. He just went to Florida the other day, hopefully not with our $450.

Hofberg's

For more than 30 years Hofberg's has been the place to go for real delicatessen. Corned beef sandwiches, immense Frankfurters, Lox and Bagels, fantastic Strawberry Shortcake and Cheesecake from our own bakery, pitchers of beer—that's the kind of food we serve. And it's served by people who don't care if we make money or not. They feed you the way they feed themselves—and they're pretty hearty eaters.
So the next time you're hungry and a tiny, little hamburger on an oversized roll just won't do, come to Hofberg's and eat like there's no tomorrow.

McMillen, Maryland Spoil GW Opener

McMillen. The 6-11 forward displayed his amazing outside shooting touch together with his rebounding ability as he helped wake the lethargic Terrapins from the mire in which they were bogged.

The Terps began hustling and fighting for loose balls and the previously active GW team found itself standing still. Maryland shot ahead with a 15-1 burst and the Colonials never seriously threatened again.

The difference between the two squads was quite apparent. Maryland played a tough 1-2-2 zone defense and forced the Colonials into countless bad shots and 12 turnovers in the first half. The Terrapins, on the other hand, were able to penetrate the Buff defense, or lack of it. McMillen and Len Elmore, a rugged forward, were able to control both boards and trigger a torrid fast break.

The first half ended with the momentum and a 61-39 score in favor of Maryland's Terrapins. GW's Coach, Carl Stone, decided that it was quite necessary to shake up the lineup to create some sort of movement. He started Randy Click and Tom

This so called "second team" was quite effective and was able to create the necessary motion in the previously sluggish Buff and managed to keep GW's scoring on an even keel with that of the Terps. This move, however, came too late as the Colonials were too far behind to stage a major comeback.

After three minutes had gone by in the second half, the starters were brought back in. GW was able to score against the Terps, but the lack of defense was evident as Maryland built the lead to 30 points.

With about half the period gone, GW managed to accidentally combine on the "right" group of players. Baltimore, Smith, Rosepink, Tallent and Howard Mathews began to shoot, rebound and run. They were able to make a dent in the huge margin that the Terps had built up. Although the game was too far out of reach when the Buff started moving, it was encouraging to the remaining fans to see some sort of team play. The final score was not indicative of the game. On the way to establishing a new school scoring record, Maryland showed why they are among the top ten teams in the nation. According to Coach Stone, the Terps played "exceptionally well." Stone also added that McMillen "played like a real All-American." The lanky star wound up with a game high 35 points on 14 of 16 shots from the floor. He also led both teams in rebounding with 13. The Colonials will attempt to rebound from this shattering loss by finding the right combination against Catholic.

Tallent and Morris Heroics Give Frosh Spectacular Victory

by Jerry Cooper

GW's talented freshmen made a head start toward "next year." Saturday night, with a hard earned 88-85 victory over Maryland's exceptional frosh team. The Baby Buff had to summon up all their saavy and heart in order to hold on after blowing a 56-39 halftime lead.

The game showed the yearlings at their best as they temporarily broke the game open in the first half with 16 consecutive points. Without their star, Tom Roy, who had drawn three fouls trying to cope with Colonial giant, Clyde Burwell, Maryland could not handle the pressure of the Buff's 1-3-1 zone. During the streak every player scored at least two points.

A pressure defense continued as both Burwell and his high school teammate, Haviland Harper, continued their shotblocking on the back line of the zone. In the first half Burwell blocked four shots, including lay up attempts by both Roy and 6-8 Owen Brown. Harper in turn blocked three including two jump shots from the corner. At the front of the zone, point man Keith Morris was constantly harrasing the Terp guards, Don White and Bill Hahn.

On offense the Colonials were scoring from close in, mainly due to some extremely sharp passing. Morris and his crony at guard, Pat Tallent, were moving the ball well. At the same time Burwell was passing to Harper in a perfect execution of the back door play.

It must be noted that Roy was forced to sit out 16 minutes of the first half due to foul trouble. The Terps problems without their big man points up how important fouls can be in a game.

The second half reversed the trends of the first. It was the Colonials who were making the mistakes. The errors were due mainly to inexperience. Maryland had made no significant changes in their defense. Roy's presence was helpful on offense and seemed to make no difference on defense. Tallent was the cement which was keeping GW together.

Roy became dominant on offense until he was whistled out of the game by the officials when Burwell got position and made him charge. In one stretch before that Roy had scored 9 of 11 points for the Terps and eight in a row. His performance led the Maryland resurgence. At the same time that the Terp Toddlers were taking the game from GW, the officials were losing control. To the partisan Colonial boosters, it appeared that all the calls were going the wrong way.

The referees made many questionable calls. They seemed to feel an obligation to even up their bad calls by making another one at the opposite end of the floor.

By the end of the game Burwell, Harper, Roy and Brown had been made to take an early rest, each committing five personal fouls. The absence of these key players drastically changed the complexion of the game. It became a seesaw battle of two smaller, and heavily substituted teams.

Two non scholarship substitutes, Pete DiLorenzo and Kalvin Block were instrumental to the Colonial cause. DiLorenzo broke a rebound loose from Brown after Burwell missed a foul try. This enabled hustling Bob Shanta to put the ball in the hoop. DiLorenzo also fed Block beautifully for the final and clinching basket.

Shanta was the rest of the show under the boards until the game's end. He got three key rebounds and was fouled twice by Brown, which caused Brown to foul out. While all this excitement was going on Morris and Tallent remained unperturbed.

They handled the ball and their defensive assignments with the same cool and ease they had shown all game. Morris was forced to guard taller players for the last five minutes of the game. This confident backcourt duo even played an abbreviated game of volleyball to break Maryland's press and set up that final basket.

The freshmen showed the stuff of which they are made. With two of their big men fouled out and a third, Ned Riddle, not suited up, they withstood the charging Terrapins. Combined with all their very obvious talents they showed poise, and a strong desire to win. They never stopped bustling and never stopped playing defense, even while the offense was faltering. Actually they did everything a good basketball team should.

Buses to Catholic Game

Coach Stone's Colonials attempt to bounce back from their Maryland defeat this Wednesday, as they tangle with the Catholic U. Cardinals in their little gym.

The Cardinals, led by sophomore forward battler, Bob Adrion, have dropped two contests already this season. The two close defeats came against American U. and Delaware.

Although it's an away game, there will be free buses taking students up and back. Two buses will leave, one at 5:30 from the Center Bookstore loading dock on I Street and one at 7:30, leaving from the 21st St. side of the Center. The 7:30 bus will make one stop at Thurston hall before proceeding to the game.
